The applications of four other citizens of the township were read before the supervisors. The candidates for appointment were Albert Bullivant, Carl Hubbel, E. B. Hildebrandt and Arthur Thompson.

The appointment of McAuliffe creates a vacancy in the Redwood City police force which has no desk man will be filled by Officer Woods, whose position as traffic officer, Officer Thorpe will probably succeed.

Interment was in Holy Cross cemetery at Menlo Park and followed by a mass celebrated at Mt. Carmel Catholic church.

COASTSIDE RESORTS RAIDED

A raid upon three resorts at Rockaway beach Sunday morning by a posse of federal agents may result in a wholesale clean-up of vice dens in this county. An investigation of conditions in coast-side resorts will be conducted by District Attorney Swart, according to announcement made this week. Swart also announced that in addition to any action which the federal courts may take in the matter of the three resorts raided, that the county licenses would be revoked.

The raid Sunday was the result of a letter from the father of an Oakland girl who stated that following the Stanford University of California football game his daughter and her escort went to one of the Rockaway beach resorts, became intoxicated, and that the girl was attacked by several men present including the proprietor.

The federal agents state that when raided liquor was found in all three places, and that in at least one of the places they found drinking parties of boys and girls of high school and college age.

The raiding party at the Wave grocery was attacked by the proprietor, James Karkalos. The other places raided were Rockaway Inn, Herbert Bassinetti, proprietor; and Rockaway restaurant, Charles Gust, proprietor.

The two latter are charged with the possession and sale of liquor. Karkalos is charged with these offenses and with an attack upon prohibition agents.

The vice crusade on the coast-side resorts has been given consideration by both District Attorney Swart and Sheriff McGrath. It has been suggested that a special deputy be appointed by the sheriff to visit at unexpected intervals all persons licensed by the county to sell soft drinks, and that any violations of the law be punished. It is now unlawful to sell soft drinks without securing a county license.

A surprising aspect of the present case was raised early Wednesday morning when a fire of unknown origin completely destroyed the Wave Grocery. James Karkalos, proprietor of the establishment was in the San Francisco city jail together with the two other men at the time of the fire, which friends of the proprietor, claim was started in revenge by enemies of Karkalos. Karkalos will appear for arraignment before United States Commissioner Francis Krull on Monday.

Bassinetti was arraigned on Tuesday and is now at liberty on $10,000 cash bail, and his other companion Gust is due for arraignment today.

New Orleans Gets Flowers From Here

200,000 BLOSSOMS
SHIPPED DURING
WEEK TO MARKET

Redwood City Flowers Shown in News Reels

Motion pictures of the picking of the 200,000 chrysanthemum blossoms shipped during the week to New Orleans from the Redwood City Chrysanthemum Co. were made Sunday by the Pathe News people. The pictures will be shown throughout the United States.

The taking of the pictures of the blossoms was the result of negotiations made by the Redwood City Chamber of Commerce. Pictures were to have been made last year, but unforeseen occurrences made this impossible. This year, however, the chamber of commerce was more successful and pictures were to have been taken by a number of the news picture concerns. The wreck of the Coos Bay steamer in San Francisco last Sunday almost spoiled the plans again, however, as all available photographers were hurried to the scene of the wreck. The Pathe Company succeeded in sending a man to this city though and secured the pictures.

Shipments of chrysanthemum have continued throughout the week, and a number of carloads have been sent out by the American Railway Express Company.

Comedy Proves a Great Success

"Bertie's Cave Woman," the comedy presented by the San Carlos Community Club Friday and Saturday evenings, proved to be so successful that it will be repeated on November 6 for the veterans at the Base hospital in Menlo Park.

Miss Thelma Wright, playing the part of Ann Banning, charming western cow girl, and "Speed Maguire," played by West Mallory, her foreman, made the English aristocratic party rather uncomfortable. The aristocrats were portrayed by Mesdames James Hugh Martin and L. P. Williams, and Messrs. Harry Gee and Harold Jones.

Bob Banning, acted by Clarence Wright, proved to be the bandit who robbed the Englishmen as a joke, but found that his position was rather insecure when he learned that he had been framed by the sheriff, Phil Harder. Porter Hefflin played the part of the sheriff.

The play was under the direction of Harold Jones, and Phil Noerager was general chairman. Mrs. B. A. White and Mrs. Porter Hefflin acted on the reception committee and W. E. Willits and William Scott, were doorknopers.

The committee and people who assisted them in making the play, such a success were Clarence Wright, stage manager, assisted by Victor Monte, Arlington Castagnino, F. A. Thomas, Wright's Antique Shop and the Diamond Loan Company of San Francisco.

The general chairman, Phil Noerager, was ably assisted by E. P. Williams, who had charge of the programs; N. A. Martin, scenery; E. H. James, seating; Mrs. E. H. James, window cards; and Mrs. N. A. Egilbert, publicity chairman.

B. A. White, chairman of the ticket committee, was assisted by Jack Simpson, Clarence A. Wright, Mrs. A. Catagnino, Porter Hefflin, Mrs. J. E. P. Williams, Mrs. Jack Simpson and Lew Price.

Miss Madeline Holchamp and Mrs. Reed rendered vocal and piano selections during the intermissions.

SAN GREGORIO RANCHER IS KILLED IN AUTO CRASH

When the car in which he was riding with his son-in-law, John Davis of San Gregorio, plunged over a steep embankment on the La Honda grade last Thursday night, Fred Weingard, well-known San Gregorio dairyman, was instantly killed. Davis testified at the inquest held at the parlors of the James Crowe Co. in this city Friday that he must have fallen asleep at the wheel of the car which he was driving. Davis was only slightly injured.

Funeral services for the deceased were held Monday at the James Crowe parlors and were conducted by Rev. Patrick Ryan of Mt. Carmel Catholic church. Interment was in Holy Cross cemetery, Menlo Park.

Woodside Woman is Killed

When a car in which she was riding and driven by her daughter crashed into an oil truck Mrs. Bessie Templeton of Woodside received injuries Saturday which resulted in her death shortly after the accident. Mrs. Templeton, her daughter, Miss Anna Templeton, and her brother David Stormont were driving near Livermore when the crash occurred.

The cause of the wreck is said to have been a heavy smoke from a grass fire which made it impossible for the driver to see ahead. A heavy oil truck was ahead, and the Templeton car drove into it. In the wreck which resulted Mrs. Templeton was killed, Miss Templeton was badly cut and her wrist fractured and Stormont suffered serious bruises and possibly fractured ribs. The driver of the oil truck, G. J. Rankin, was thrown to the ground by the impact, but was uninjured.

The injured parties were picked up by passing motorists and were taken to St. Paul's hospital in Livermore. It was here that Mrs. Templeton passed away within a few minutes of her arrival. The other members of the party were given treatment.

Funeral services were held Monday for Mrs. Templeton at the Presbyterian church in Menlo Park. The services were attended by hundreds of sorrowing friends of the deceased from all parts of the state. Interment was in Alta Mesa cemetery at Mayfield.

Mrs. Templeton was a native of Scotland and was 48 years of age. She and her husband have made their home in this vicinity for the past 17 years and were popular and highly respected members of the community. They have for a number of years been residents at Woodside where Templeton is gardener on the Schilling estate.

RACE CASE ORDERED IN COURT

The case of James McDonald, well-known horse race man, who was arrested at Tanforan on August 23 by Sheriff McGrath, has been ordered back to the superior court of this county for trial by the District Court of Appeals of San Francisco. The action of the district court was taken Wednesday when a writ of habeas corpus secured by attorneys of McDonald was ordered discharged and McDonald was remanded to custody.

Declaring that charges against McDonald were sufficient to charge a public nuisance, Judge Cashion stated:

"The transaction was in effect an agreement whereby the sums contributed were to be pooled and the entire fund, less such deductions as the Jockey Club was authorized to make, divided among the contributors who selected the winning horse."

"Had the amount to be deducted been fixed in advance, as is usual, the transaction would have constituted what is known as a mutual pool."

"But it is claimed that the element of uncertainty with respect to the action of the fund holder distinguishes the arrangement from the ordinary betting pool and that the sums contributed were by reason of such uncertainty not bet or wagered."

"While in the present case it was not directly averred that the sum contributed by the petitioner was bet or wagered, a bet, nevertheless, was the effect of the facts alleged and it was the manifest purpose of the pleading to charge an offense under the state law prohibiting gambling."

The case against McDonald was heard before Judge Buck on August 25 at which time it was submitted on briefs. The case is in the nature of a test of the California laws against horse gambling and is being watched with interest by racing interests throughout the state. Judge Buck refused to grant a writ of habeas corpus and the case was taken to the higher court by the defendant.

McDonald was arrested at the Tanforan race track by Sheriff J. J. McGrath and charged with gambling. The arrest had been arranged before hand by officials of the racing club in order to test the law before the courts. McDonald volunteered to be the one arrested. Sheriff McGrath was notified, and when he arrived he found McDonald conducting a regular sporting event.

McDonald was taken into custody and was arraigned before Justice of the Peace Rudolph Rapsey. Following the arraignment he was brought to the jail here and held in lieu of $100 cash bail which he refused to post. He was later released on bond after an alternate writ of habeas corpus had been secured from Judge Buck by Walter Linforth, attorney for racing club.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

Leasing activities continue to hold the interest of the oil companies in Kern county. Should terms of leases be carried out upward of 100 new wells would be drilled there within the next year. Land leased for oil exploitation lies in every part of Kern county, some of it forty miles from present production areas.

Allen Ensley McClanahan, 77, who died at his home in Berkeley last week, claimed the distinction of having been the youngest man to carry a musket in the Civil War. Born in 1850, he crossed the plains by ox team with his family in 1857 and enlisted at 14 in 1864 in Company I, 7th California Volunteer Infantry, being mustered out from Presidio, San Francisco.

California boasts 5,636 public educational institutions, exclusive of her universities, it was announced last week by the State Department of Education. The schools were classified as follows: Elementary schools, 4,125; kindergarten, 997; high schools, 466; teachers' colleges, 7; junior colleges, 10; junior high schools, 121.

One hundred deep-sea fishermen of San Diego united last week in a court action against the State Department of Agriculture and the State Fish Exchange, attacking the constitutionality of the law which empowers the State market director to regulate the price of fresh fish. The law permits the director to place an arbitrary limit on the price fishermen may ask for their catch. The price fixed in recent months is less than the cost of operating the fishing fleet, plaintiffs contend.

The joint legislative water investigation committee, headed by Assemblyman Bradford S. Crittenden of Tracy met at Sacramento last week, starting a tour of Northern California dam and reservoir sites. The committee, which is to report to the 1929 Legislature with recommendations as to water conservation and distribution plans, consists of four Senators and four Assemblymen.

With $59,000 in Modoc county funds made available last week, plans are being made for State-county co-operative work in providing more adequate highway facilities between Alturas, Modoc county, California, and Lakeview, Lake county, Oregon. With 1,118 suicides reported in California last year the state board of health a few days ago declared that acts of self destruction have reached the point where attention must be paid to the cause of suicide. California's suicide rate for last year was 27.1 persons per 100,000 of population. San Diego led with a rate of 48.9 suicides per 100,000, while Sacramento was second with a rate of 42.1. Los Angeles reported 283 suicides in 1926, a rate of 37.9; San Francisco 199 or a rate of 35.1 and Oakland 61, or a rate of 23.4. The fact that California is a haven for invalids and migratory workers is regarded as one of the chief factors in swelling the number of suicides in the state.

There are $2,764 borrowers from building and loan associations in California at the present time, or an increase of 26 per cent, or 17,212 over 1926. This is shown in the annual report of George S. "Petters," joyriders and other examples of "flaming youth" were responsible for approximately 80 per cent of the automobile thefts in California last year, it was estimated by Frank G. Snook, chief of the State division of motor vehicles. Stolen car records reveal, Snook said, that something like 18,115 motor cars were taken by young people intent on having a good time. Smith announced recently that more than 700,000 public school text books are in the process of publication at the plant, and a new order for 125,000 civics has just been received from the state board of education. The civics are for delivery January 1st. In addition to the text book jobs the printers are turning out for 1927 statutes, containing the laws enacted by the last legislature. The peak production of 200 volumes per day will not be reached until next week, Smith said. The plant has just completed the printing of 25,380 elementary arithmetic at a cost of 24 1/2 cents per book, and 25,535 first readers at an average cost of 17 1/2 cents per copy.

Oil field operations reported to State Oil and Gas Supervisor R. D. Bush during the week ending October 15, 1927, show 21 new wells started, 48 compared with 16 during the previous week. Of the 21 notices to drill filed last week, two were for wells in the Long Beach field, one in the Montebello field, one in Los Angeles county, three in the fields of Ventura county, one in San Luis Obispo county, one in Alameda county, 10 in the fields of Kern county, one in Fresno county, and one in Kings county. The total new wells this year is 977.

More than 200,000 persons will attend the Pacific Travel and Trade Exposition, which is to open in the Civic Auditorium, San Francisco, on Armistice Day, according to estimates made by various committees in charge of the arrangements. More than 100,000 students and teachers from all parts of the State are expected. Products of agriculture and of various arts and industries from counties surrounding or reached by the Pacific, will be displayed in a manner that impress upon the student an idea of the comprehensive resources of those sections of the world with which California and the United States interchange trade.

Total agreement with the stand of William J. Cooper, State Superintendent of public instruction, that life certificates for teachers should be abolished, was expressed last week by Dr. Elwood P. Cubberley, dean of the Stanford School of Education at Palo Alto. "California life teaching certificates are the cheapest of any State in the Union," Dr. Cubberley said. "All that is required is for a teacher to get a job and hold it for 44 months, and the life certificate is granted."

The State of California's outstanding bonded indebtedness totals $103,013,500, it was announced by State Treasurer Charles G. Johnson, last week. The treasurer's report showed $113,208,000 bonds sold, of which $10,194,500 represents the amount redeemed. Out of an authorized bond total of $140,105,000, Johnson said, $26,897,000 worth of securities are unsold. The amount of bonds outstanding, the report showed, includes highway securities, India Basin and veterans welfare bonds. The treasurer's statement included the estimate that California's population as of October 1 totals 5,112,000.

Petitions from Monterey, California, for revival of the $800,000 authorized harbor development project at that place were given consideration for several hours last week by the rivers and harbors board of the army engineer corps at Washington, D. C., but with no indication as to what decision the board reached.

Announcement was made recently by Charles H. Camper, city superintendent of schools at Chico, Butte county, that the 1928 convention of the California Teachers' Association, Northern District, will be held next September in Chico.

W. A. H. Kohler, Sacramento resident, last week announced he had made plans for a trans-Pacific flight from Mather Field, Sacramento, to Shanghai, China, about January 1st next. Kohler claims to have the financial backing, as well as the construction of an air liner capable of carrying a large number of passengers, and of making the trip in sixty-four hours. The ship will cost $103,095, he said, and will be equipped with four engines with a combined horsepower of 3,000. Kohler proposes to name the plane The Heart of California. It is to be built in the East.

Defensive Bids

A DEFENSIVE bid has been defined as one made upon less than original bidding strength after an opponent has bid.

If dealer makes a bid he thereby assumes the offensive in the game, and the opponents, unless very strong, must act defensively. It is so important for them to prevent dealer's bid winning the declaration that they may venture a bid upon less than original bid strength. Most authorities agree that it is best to bid in this situation even with 1 1/2 quick tricks less; therefore 1 1/2 quick tricks in all that is considered necessary for a defensive bid.

Different conditions alter circumstances to such an extent that we shall consider the bidding by second hand under the following headings:

After dealer's bid of one of a suit, second hand may

- (1) Overbid in another suit.
- (2) Overbid in a no trump (not defensive).
- (3) Use the Informative double (not defensive).

(1) When second hand contemplates overbidding dealer, there are a number of points to be considered. Is there danger of dealer's going game if his bid is left in? If so, second hand should bid defensively if possible. The strength required for such a bid of one in a higher valued suit than dealer has bid, is one and a half quick tricks. If second hand must bid two he should have two quick tricks or original bidding strength.

If second hand is so strong that he feels sure dealer cannot go game, a second question arises: has he sufficient strength to attempt to wrest the offensive away from the dealer? With good original bidding strength in a major this would seem possible, and second hand should therefore overbid dealer when holding an original bid in a major suit.

A minor suit having been bid by dealer, second hand holding a hand of about two quick tricks value knows that he can prevent game being made in that minor, but possibly feels that he will be unable to make game at a major unless his partner holds strength enough for a defensive bid. If he passes and awaits developments, not only is there a chance of his partner's making a bid which would greatly help towards finding their best declaration, but third hand is very sure to take out his partner's minor if he holds as good as a defensive bid in a major, and either positive or negative information on this point would be of great value to second hand. Therefore second hand should pass many minor suit bids with the expectation of bidding on the second round after gaining as much information as possible from the intervening bids or passes. With a major suit bid, however, second hand cannot be so sure of being able to prevent game, and the necessity for a defensive bid is frequently apparent. The following examples illustrate these various points.

After dealer bids one heart, second hand should bid one spade if he holds:

- (1) S-A x x x; H-x x x; D-K x x; C-x x x.
- (2) S-K Q x x; H-x x; D-Q J x; C-x x x.

- (3) S-x x x; H-x x; D-K Q x; C-K Q x x.
- (4) S-Q J x; H-x x; D-K x x; C-A 10 x x.

If dealer's bid is one of a minor—clubs, for instance—and second hand holds the following hands he should pass, because there is no danger of dealer's going game at clubs nor any hope of second hand's being able to go game in any bid unless his partner has sufficient strength to make a defensive bid:

- (1) S-A J x; H-K x; D-K x x; C-x x x.
- (2) S-x x x; H-K Q x; D-A Q x x; C-x x x.

Second hand's bid therefore may be purely defensive and made upon less than original bidding strength, or it may be made on more than minimum strength in an effort to wrest the offensive from the dealer. Fourth hand cannot always be sure which form of bid his partner has made, but since it may be defensive he should credit him with only defensive strength.

Perfect Antidote for Snake Bites Secured

Antidotes for the poison of the rattlesnake, the copperhead and the water moccasin, which, if injected into the blood-stream, within a few hours after a bite has been suffered, will almost certainly prevent death, have been prepared by a Brazilian doctor, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. With the aid of the army and other agencies, he collected the venom of more than 4,000 rattlesnakes in this country, then proceeded to develop antidotes or antivenoms by inoculating horses. The process was a complicated one and involved preparations from the venom of more than thirty species of rattlesnakes. Each is slightly different, but all work on the same principle. The preparations have been tested by the public health service.

Sees Greater War Ahead

DAVID LLOYD GEORGE, perhaps the greatest statesman that England has produced in recent years, is in no doubt as to the future, and that future he declares is one of war and struggle. "Another war is inevitable," he states, "a more terrible war than has ever been experienced in the history of the world—the fate of the world depends upon it—unless we can induce the nations of the world to trust to law and justice and not to force."

"Two-thirds of Europe is armed to the teeth, with armies as numerous as before the World war—in many respects much better equipped—the other third is helpless at the mercy of the strong man armed, the neighbor. The position is more terrible, shattering and frightening than anything we had prior to 1914."

We have heard naval and military men right in our own land speaking of the next war with as much assurance as though it were the next election or the next season. This is an attitude too general among the powers that be. Envy of other nations distrust of other races and commercial greed are working hand in hand to bring about another conflict.

It is, therefore, important that every individual and every organization should dedicate his or its efforts to the furtherance of international accord and understanding. The interests who gain by war are always ready to promote hatred and dissension. It is up to the people to nullify their efforts by a constant and persistent propaganda of peace.

"Until those who enforced the treaty disarm," continues Lloyd George, "it will be a gross breach of faith that will redound to their dishonor. We promised it solemnly and we ought to discharge our obligation."

We believe that popular opinion in every land is opposed to war, and that when popular opinion becomes the guide in national governments war will be outlawed. When armed force and secret treaties hold sway, commercial cupidity will be found in the safe but immediate background.

Our Ideas Enlarge

OUR ideas change, and with the changing our outlook should become wider and more encompassing. This is no where more true than in the field of education. No longer is the man who has committed to memory a list of formulae or a collection of long words able to pass as educated. Education has come to be considered more than possession of facts, it is the realization of a responsibility.

Realizing this a professor of a western university has drawn up a list of questions which if a pupil can answer conscientiously in the affirmative, that pupil is an educated man or woman. The questions follow:

- Has education given you sympathy with every worthy cause?
- Have you learned how to make friends and how to keep them?
- Has it made you a brother to the weak?
- Can you look an honest man or a pure woman straight in the eye?
- Do you see anything to love in a little child?
- Are you good for anything yourself?
- Can you be happy alone?
- Can you look into a mud puddle and see anything in it but mud?

Thompson as Censor

THE right of a public official, even the mayor of a city, to decide what the people shall and shall not read is very limited, if we have any understanding at all of what is generally considered free government. What will be the result of Mayor Thompson's efforts in Chicago to have all books which he considers as favorable to Great Britain and her people burned, we cannot yet tell. But even the arrogance of a man like Mayor Thompson in setting himself up as a censor of the literature of a city is in itself unique in this country, although it finds many a parallel in ancient and medieval times.

We have no idea that Thompson will "get by" with his attempt. The people of America are too jealous of their rights to allow the mayor or anyone else to dictate their literature to them.

The action of Mayor Thompson is a piece of narrow minded bigotry which in any individual would be contemptible and disgusting, but in the mayor of America's second largest city is an attempted usurpation of power and authority too characteristic of the man to create surprise yet too dangerous and offensive to go unchallenged.

"THE WORST IS YET TO COME" Wellington

Statistics Show Increase In Divorce Cases Here

By ESTO BROUGHTON

Special to the Times-Gazette
Sacramento, October 26—The English god, who presides over marital warfare, is proving more than a match for Cupid in California these days, according to the statement on marriage and divorce issued today by L. E. Ross, chief of the State Bureau of Vital Statistics.

Although the latest records show that there was a grand total of 56,664 marriages performed in this state last year, representing a net increase of 1684 and a gain of 2.9 per cent, according to the state expert, these figures must be balanced up against an astonishing increase of 18.6 percent in the number of divorces, to gain a fair picture of the troubled state of matrimony.

The center of the matrimonial domestic turbulence is in the great cities, Ross declared, pointing to the tremendous divorce score of Los Angeles, with 4,685 granted during the year, indicating with an increase of 925 over the previous year a 25 per cent gain. San Francisco closely follows the southern metropolis, with a divorce score of 2,387 representing a net gain of 431 and a 22 percent increase over the preceding year.

If country couples are not happier than city folks apparently they do not run to the courts so frequently to release them from their bad marriage bargains, statistics indicate.

Colusa county, alone of the rural communities, stages a very high increased divorce rate. With an increase from 9 to 18 from 1925 to 1926, this county reaches a high water mark with a 100 percent gain in marital ship wrecks, the state bureau claims.

About three state wives topped the divorce courts in this state to every husband who seeks legal freedom from the "ties that bind." But when a California husband does become dissatisfied with domesticity and seeks judicial authority to break his matrimonial bonds, wife is willing to have him go, statistics showing that more than 80 percent of the actions for divorce brought by the husband are uncontested.

The honeymoon usually lasts through at least 12 lunar moons, since less than a dozen of the 12,000 divorces granted were filed within the first year of marriage, the state figures indicate. After that conjugal battles increase in intensity until judicial truces reach a maximum in the divorce courts in the fourth year of wedded life. The annual rate of "crashing the divorce gate" remains fairly steady from that time until about the tenth years. Endurance of the other spouse has then become something of a habit, in Ross's opinion, and the divorce rate gradually declines. From the 20th year the husband is more inclined to tire of his aging wife than she is of her mate and the proportion of separations sought by the husband increases.

"Caveman stuff" is not so popular in real life as in fiction apparently for California women more often "walk out" on their marriage partner because of "cruelty" than for any other reason, the statistician insists.

But Enoch Arden disappearance stunts are more often pulled by "friend wife" than "friend husband," according to the number of suits filed by the masculine spouse for "desertion," it being the leading "cause" charged by husbands.

Only one-half of one percent of the divorces granted in this state were granted for "drunkenness" and husbands were the "hard drinkers" in most every case, Ross says.

"Infidelity" is a charge seldom hurled by one spouse at the other, but it is often charged against wives by husbands than vice versa. Only about one percent of the divorces granted were for this cause, statistics indicate.

The latest divorce figures for the following counties are:

Learning How to Live

BY O. LAWRENCE HAWTHORNE

What is the program of my life? What shall my purpose be? Such questions come to every thoughtful man. And in the measure that he rightly answers them will he contribute to the great eternal plan. Clothed only in the ignorance of mortal mind, we come To grope our feeble way across the years; Enlightenment points out the gates of happiness for some, While others know but drudgery and fears.

We must not be resigned to do some mediocre task; We must not fill the days with petty things; For opportunity is here, and duty bids us ask Of life the gifts that education brings. There is no need today for any man to suffer long The boredom of an ordinary place; If his ambition is sincere, and if his will is strong, He may become a leader of his race!

In this great day of schools for all, the lowliest can rise To heights of eminence and lasting fame. Your deeds the voice of destiny may herald to the skies, And generations reverence your name! So, let us seek the fuller life of fundamental truth, And gain each day what knowledge has to give. America be praised, where every maid and every youth May learn how best to work and play and live!

STOLEN CAR EVIL MAY BE CURTAILED

Prudence in Parking Will Aid Abatement

Joy riders, "petters," "cuddlers" and their like were responsible for 80 percent of the automobiles stolen in California last year, the Division of Motor Vehicles revealed this week.

Love-lorn swains, light of pocket but long on nerve, appropriated 18,115 automobiles during the period, it was estimated, in order the flaming youth might have its fill.

In about 95 percent of the cases, the harassed owner, who had carelessly left his keys in the transmission, recovered his car next day several miles from where he had left it. Frequently, it was minus a spare tire and other detachable accessories. Records furnished the division by the theft bureau of the Pacific Coast Underwriters Conference show 22,644 cars were reported stolen during the year ending June 30 last. During the previous year, 26,402 were stolen.

Between 90 and 95 percent of the cars stolen were recovered. Frank G. Snook, chief of the division, declared the stolen car evil could be almost entirely abated if car owners would exercise a little prudence when parking their machines. He offered the following as rules to be observed: "Never leave your car with the

WARNING GIVEN MOTORISTS ON ILLEGAL LIGHTS

The sheriff and chiefs of police in communities throughout the county as well as the state traffic squad are co-operating with the California Public Safety Conference in supporting the intensive campaign launched by the State Division of Motor Vehicles against illegal automobile headlights. Final warning has been issued and "one-eyed" automobiles and cars in violation of the headlight law in other respects are being stopped in large numbers.

The basis lighting rule is that no device shall project a glaring or dazzling light to any person in front of the vehicle and headlights equipped with lenses, reflectors or control devices which have been approved by the state division are presumed to comply with this requirement, according to Percy E.

POWER is generated by energy and energy by the will 'to do.'

Have you ever seen a heavy cart stuck fast in a rut of mud? The jaded horse unable to move it another inch because of drooping spirit and lack of interest.

A dozen onlookers--some merely waiting to see what is going to happen -- others giving advise and direction. But none of these will start the cart moving.

Then from the crowd step out three or four 'doers.' They put their shoulders to the wheel lending both effort and example until others follow them. The thing begins to move-- gains momentum as all things do when once out of a rut.

And so, also it is with civic progress--communitiy movements, local enterprise -- when "doers put their shoulders to the wheel.

Each high school newspaper in the state of California will be represented by two delegates Friday and Saturday, October 28 and 29, at the fifth annual convention of the California Scholastic Press Association to be held at Stanford University.

"The Sequoia Times," Sequoia High School's prize publication, will be represented by Lorin Hamman, Mauricia Mayer, Ed Coleman and Miss Schmidt at this convention. Beatrice Clyne, commissioner of publicity, will also attend.

A very interesting program for the convention has been arranged by the Press Association and the auspices of the Stanford faculty. An opening speech by Hon. Chas. Rowell will begin the convention program at 11 o'clock in the assembly hall. Luncheon will be served at noon in Stanford Union, immediately after which an illustrated lecture will be given. The afternoon will be devoted to local and open discussion. The annual banquet, given in Stanford Union, will be at six o'clock. The evening will be spent in dancing and social meeting. Saturday, the program will be entirely business and open discussion.

The success of previous conventions has proven that much benefit is derived for high school journalists who attend these conventions. The exchanging of modern journalistic viewpoints made these conventions of interest to the majority of high schools in California, and representatives from all are expected.

Last year, The Sequoia Times, the local high school publication, took first place in schools of 1,000 enrollment or under.

Approach School Crossings Slowly

nia has practically doubled during recent years. In the last 12 months residents of this state drained 433,450,216 quart bottles of milk. In 1918 they consumed only 220,000,000 quarts.

Prohibition is one factor in the sudden popularity of milk. There's many a man boasting a milk-fed complexion today whom his friends once identified by a red, red nose. The sharp increase in the use of dairy products started soon after the advent of Mr. Volstead's law.

But the big factor, according to Dr. Duckworth, is that California's dairy plants have "cleaned house." The increased consumption, he believes, is largely due to pasteurization, which affords the "drinking public" protection from tuberculosis and other diseases.

People have come to demand both safety and quality in their milk, asserts the dairy bureau chief, and they are rapidly getting it. A better quality product, with more cream on the milk, is required under the new dairy act now in effect.

And nearly 80 per cent of the state's milk supply is pasteurized. State milk tests, conducted over a 6-month period by the state bureau, gave scores well over 90 per cent for most of the state's leading dairies.

With approximately 150 city and county inspectors constantly on the job inspecting the milk supply and a general trend toward pasteurization, California is well on the way toward a high standard, carefully protected product.

State Officers Warned To Protect Children

State traffic officers this week received orders to arrest any person traveling past a schoolhouse, where children are either entering or leaving at a speed in excess of 15 miles an hour.

The order was issued by Frank G. Snook, chief of the division of motor vehicles, when a check of the records revealed that more than a score of school children were either killed or injured by motorists during the first two weeks of school.

The officers were told to charge such persons with reckless driving.

Authority for the order was obtained by Snook from Section 113 of the motor vehicle act which prohibits a speed greater than 15 miles an hour in the vicinity of schoolhouses where children are either entering or leaving.

In connection with the order Snook again urges motorists of the most localities, affirms Duckworth. And the use of milk will continue to increase accordingly," insists.

While raw milk standards have been increased for public protection, the state dairy bureau head declares that pasteurization is a "very absolutely sure method of eliminating all harmful bacteria."

Production of milk in California, in recent years, declares Duckworth, has increased sufficiently to meet the increased demand for raw products.

state to use extreme care to avoid hitting children.

"The best way to do this is to keep your speed down," he said.

"Watch carefully at intersections and between parked cars. Chevrolet are liable to dodge out at any time on their way to and from school. Remember your hurry to get to your destination may rob someone of a loved one."

DANGER FROM CARBON MONOXIDE GAS POINTED

When winter comes and motorists are more inclined to work on their cars in a closed garage, the danger from carbon monoxide is greatly increased.

This is the warning issued by Louis P. Signer, head of the Free Emergency Department of the California State Automobile Association, who says:

"Never run the engine in a closed garage. Motorists should remember that operating a car in a closed garage may mean death; that carbon monoxide is an odorless, invisible gas which produces fatal results without warning. If a poisonous gas present in the engine exhaust and is a product of complete combustion. Nausea, headache, drowsiness and dizziness are symptoms of the poisoning. Persons overcome should be moved at once to the fresh air and given artificial respiration, if breathing has stopped. Send for a doctor and an oxygen-carbon dioxide inhaler at once.

"If you must operate your car inside, back the rear end outside, open door, or attach a hose, leading outside, to the exhaust

Fire Loss of the State is Held to a Minimum

By CLEM WHITAKER

Special to the Times-Gazette

SACRAMENTO, October 27—California's state forest rangers, backed up by increased county co-operation, an adequate fire-flight budget and thousands of citizens who have enlisted in the cause of conservation, have held the state's fire losses for 1927 to a minimum, according to the season report of State Forester M. B. Pratt, just submitted to the governor.

"It can safely be said," declares Pratt, "that the state forestry organization is on the high road toward its goal—that of adequate state wide protection."

"The state fire organization of 1927 was the most efficient one in the history of the state and although there were large grass fires in the foothills, due to the extremely large amount of vegetation, the loss of timber and watershed cover was extremely low."

"Public co-operation in securing observance of the fire laws, incidentally, has been one of the greatest factors in reducing California's stupendous timber losses, which, in the days before the organization of a state fire patrol, ran as high as $5,000,000 annually, and counts the foresters."

And county co-operation "has been another most important factor," he asserts. During the present season, 28 counties worked under the state forestry patrol under joint agreements in protecting timber, grass and grazing land, among them being Colusa, Lassen, Placer, Santa Clara, Sacramento, Santa Cruz, Solano, Stanislaus, Sonoma, Mendocino, Trinity, Tehama, Tulare, Tuolumne, Yuba, Kern, Sacramento, Riverside, Santa, Nevada, Lake, Humboldt, Fresno, El Dorado, Calaveras, Butte and Amador.

To this list of "honor counties," states Pratt, must be added other co-operating agencies, including the Contra Costa Hills Fire Protection committee, which, aided by the state lookouts, guards the Berkeley and Contra Costa hills; the U. S. Forest Service; California Forestry Association; National Protective Association; California Forest Experiment Station; the Pacific Gas & Electric Company; and the Central Pacific Land Company.

"Our objective, of course, is one hundred percent co-operation by counties and all forestry agencies," adds Pratt. "As the patrol system was organized only six years ago, we have actual-

DEPARTMENT TO CHECK ON DRIVING LICENSES

An immediate check of the files of the Division of Motor Vehicles to secure the names of motorists who are driving without a operator's card was ordered this week by Chief Frank G. Snook.

This followed the discovery by the department that approximately 25 percent of the drivers in the state are violating the law by driving without a license certificate in charge of the files estimated at 400,000 persons are without a license in the state.

Simultaneous with the order, Cook announced that a campaign would be launched to compel all drivers to obey the law.

The division has an easy means of checking the list of violators since the file of names of persons whose cards have been issued is compared with the files showing removed owners. Both are kept in numerical order.

The new motor vehicle act requires that every applicant for a license, upon first applying, must submit to an examination as to his physical and mental fitness to drive.

Snook said no person who has hit the road without a license would be prosecuted if he shows a disposition to comply with the law by applying for his card at once.

"Persons who are without an operator's license should lose no time in getting one," Snook said.

"No person who can exercise reasonable control over an automobile or who has no serious physical defects has anything to fear from the examination. The examiners are instructed to extend every courtesy to applicants and to make due allowances for stage fright and nervousness.

"To drive without an operator's card is to violate the law and leave the driver open to embarrassment and possible arrest.

"Our officers will have orders to ask every motorist for his license when stopping him for any reason. Lack of a license may mean that your trip will be delayed or that you may be compelled

PALO ALTO IS WINNER ON LOCAL FIELD

Palo Alto high school out-passed Sequoia in their annual game—there by winning from them for the first time in three years, by a score of 21-0.

Palo Alto executed her passes well, but there was a certain element of luck in the way her men snaggled them.

Aside from Palo's passing attack both teams battled evenly. There were no long runs made by either side, due to the vicious tackling by both teams.

Sequoia will have to remedy this weak passing defense if she hopes to beat the Burlingame Panthers.

The Panthers, coached by Fred Swan of Stanford's last year football team, have been playing "in and out" football. The Panthers traveled down to Palo Alto and got beat 7-6. Feeling chagrined about this they sharpened their claws for the San Jose game.

The score, 64-0, shows you what a Panther can do when he gets angry.

Although Sequoia only tied San Jose 6-6, she has a hunch she is going to down Fred Swan's team. Sequoia will have a good chance, if she only removes her vulnerability to a forward passing attack.

Editor Times-Gazette:

In looking over newspaper and incorporation committee's statements concerning the proposed incorporation of Menlo Park, I find many incorrect and misleading statements and half-truths.

To begin with, it should be borne in mind that control of the School, Sanitary, and Fire districts will remain undisturbed. In corporation will not increase the fire protection nor will it reduce fire insurance rates, for this is a matter wholly dependent upon the efficiency of the fire department.

A number of general statements have been made, such as, "Fire insurance rates are at present almost prohibitive." No comparisons have been made between the rates in incorporated towns and in Menlo Park. Further, it is said that the streets will be put in good condition and kept so, but no reason is advanced why any better repair service would be rendered by the town than by the county for the same cost.

We were promised a statement as to the probable cost of conducting the town government, as well as the assessed valuation of the area proposed to be included, but this has not been forthcoming. The statement was made that the salaries paid would be "nominal." Just what is meant by the word, "nominal" in this particular instance?

As regards finances I desire to acquaint the voters with the information that the assessed valuation is about $650,000. This sum will give the town at the highest possible tax $4500, without a bond issue, just $4500, wherewith to pay all expenses. Out of this must come the salaries of three peace officers at least $150.00 each per month; clerk and assessor, $25 per month; treasurer, $100 per year; rent $50 per month; telephone, $5 per month; furniture, say $25; record books, etc., $25. Just add up these "nominal" sums and see how much you have left for advertising and for street work out of your $4500.

Another thought occurs to me. It has been said that it mattered not who were elected as trustees, for they "are all good men." Being good men, they must needs be honest, and presumably will appoint as Recorder (Town Judge), Marshall and Deputies, men of like character. However, in order that the voters may have an opportunity to choose intelligently, it is respectfully suggested that the various candidates for the office of trustee, state in the very near future whom they have in mind for Recorder, Marshall and Deputies. I feel that the voters are entitled to know.

Halfway across, the dusk from Al-miki moved out to meet the travelers, soon to look upon, in the berth of the schooner, death, in all horror of plague-stricken men; or to meet a treacher, as Guthrie believed, too vile for the uses of a fighting man like Laughing McDonald. But the cannibal half-breed would not be convinced, and the knife, skinned to its capote ash, and the uncaned rifle barrel thrusting from his robe, were sinister witnesses to his distrust of the Cree.

The barrens of the island purpled, then fused with the dusk. Stars glittered above the moving teams. At last in the starlight, the black masses of the hills flanking Seal Cove loomed ahead. The Indian stopped his dogs. "Zet een ovaire dere." He pointed to the invisible shore.

Ordering the disarmed Cree to remain with his dogs, Etienne called Garth for a whispered council of war.

"The schooner was not far. We stop and tie up de husky. Den you an' Shot go on way an' I tak' dees feller wid de gun een hees back an' we circle round de boat."

"All right! If either sees or hears anything, two long whistles. Will they hear our dogs if they yelp?"

"No, set een too far."

Shot, trained to silence, would be invisible in a fight, but the husky's yelping would betray them, so they were lashed to the sleds.

"Eef we don't see nodin', I mak' de feller holler to de ship. Den we wait. I tell heem he is de first een de boat wid de gun een hees ribs. He ver sear—something bad here," warned Etienne.

"He's afraid of the devil," suggested Garth, uncaning his rifle, and regretting that his army automatic hung neglected in its holster on the ship had Elkwan. This stalk of a French raid—a fight in the dark, if Etienne was a light, and he missed the feel of his pistol as he bolted, the Cree on the shoulder-strap of a bag of Mills bombs.

As they separated, Etienne gripped Garth's hand. "I meet you at de boat. Keep bein' de ice wen I mak' heem holler, eef dey shoot."

The idea of stalking dead men was grotesque, but as Garth and Shot made their way slowly toward the shore, for the stars were dim, the possibility that Etienne's suspicions were not unfounded grew in the mind of Guthrie. Suppose the Indian had seen a dead man. There might have been a fight aboard while the rest were temporarily ashore after fur. True, McDonald might be dead, but with the leader gone, Brennut, desperate, sick possibly, perhaps insane, might have evolved this scheme to lure some of the Kapikapa people across the ice. For the Indian was bound for Kapikapa when they met him.

That the race was McDonald's, Guthrie put aside, but strange things had happened before among a ship's company wintering in the ice, and who could guess what had fallen out on the Ghost?

When, in the faint light of the stars he made out the ice-shoofed poles of the schooner, Garth noted his excited dog. "Stand to, Shot!"

The alreared, stiffened, sniffing the wind, then side by side, man and dog cautiously made their approach. From behind a pressure ridge, a hundred yards from the frozen-in craft drifted with snow to her low rails, Guthrie stopped. There, under the dim stars, silent, sinister, lay the ship. Was it the sepulcher of luckless dead, or—

Two whistles from the direction of the ship startled Guthrie swiftly over the ice behind his silent dog. Circling the stern, he found behind a mound Etienne and the shaking Cree.

"What is it?"

"I hear some soun' on dat boat."

"But een de spirit," whispered the Cree.

"We go up an' listen," said Etienne, prodding the reluctant Indian forward.

Standing with rifles leveled on the plank-shoofed deck-house, they waited. Presently to the straining ears of the men came a moaning as of a creature in agony, to culminate in a crescendo of groans.

The two men peered questioningly into each other's faces. At their side the alreared trembled in a frenzy of excitement.

"Make him call to them," muttered Guthrie, with a nod at the panic-stricken Cree.

The steel muzzle of Savanne's rifle found the Indian's ribs.

In a voice shattered by terror, the Cree called: "Requay! 'Allo! But no answer from within broke the heavy silence. They waited. Again low moaning drifted from the deck-house.

"I'm going aboard," said Guthrie, and calling Shot, tepped the rifle, followed by Etienne. A dog, behind the sheathing, opened to his hand, and with the dog in front, they made their way down to the plitlike blackness of the cabin. The odor of spilled whisky, food—and the stench of corpses struck them like a blow in the face. Striking a match, Etienne lit the stub of a candle he took from his pocket. In its flickering light the two gazed in horror at the chaos around them. On the table, the floor, whisky bottles, empty, half full, lay in a litter of meat and biscuit tins, dishes and scattered food. Sitting, jammed grotesquely between boxes in a corner, a rigid hand gripping a glass, the candle lit the staring eyes and gaping mouth of a dead man.

"Black E-sault!" muttered Guthrie. "Died drunk! But that groan! Where are the rest?"

Turning, nauseated from the air and the loathsome spectacle, they found a stateroom. In two berths lay the dead bodies of the bearded mate Guthrie had met on the beach, and a sailor. Then a muffled groan and a curse led to the adjoining room. Guthrie stood in the low door, holding the candle above his head.

In a bunk a gigantic figure lay in a sleeping bag. Guthrie bent forward, thrusting his arm with the light into the room. The heavy breathing of the bulk in the berth pulsed through the small room.

"McDonald!"

Etienne crowded beside his chief, curious to see the man whose fame had swept James bay. The face was turned from the door and Guthrie entered the room to stumble over a bottle which rolled away, spilling its contents. Then he held a light over the muffled face.

As the candle lit the russet hair and unseeing eyes, flaming with fever above the shattered face with its red beard, Garth Guthrie stared motionless. Slowly his jaw dropped. As if in the spell of some strange fascination, the grimacing face in the candle light held Guthrie's unwavering eyes. Bewildered, profound, shifted slowly to amazement—to recognition.

"Craig Galbraith!" he gasped. Then swiftly turning back the robes, exposed at the base of the corded neck a jagged scar.

"Craig Galbraith!—Laughing McDonald! God!—what irony!"

Turning to the perplexed Etienne, Guthrie rapidly explained as he felt for the pulse in a huge wrist.

"Etienne, you and I have work ahead! This is flu or pneumonia. He needs some nourishment—may have starved for days. The bag has saved him—kept him warm with that fever."

"But you nurse heem—dis McDonald! Hui! Hui!" demanded the surprised half-breed.

"Nurse him!" Garth laughed rawly. "Why, this man took me on his back through hell itself—brought me through a barrage with one of his arms broken and a shot in the chest. He was my friend—my pal, understand?—saved my life! Light the galley lamp and heat some broth—soup, quick!"

"Hees name not McDonald!" asked the bewildered Etienne, dazed by the swift reversal of the situation.

"No! I never suspected—never dreamed who McDonald was. He was shot in the face while I was in the hospital. I didn't know how bad it was—never saw him again."

Guthrie found and lit a lamp; then poured some whisky in a glass and propping up the head of the unconscious man, got it down his throat. A rapid inspection of the boat discovered a fourth corpse. The Cree known to be with the schooner, and another man, had evidently deserted the dying. The absence of rash on the bodies and faces did away with the possibility of measles or smallpox. It was doubtless influenza, contracted from an Indian or Eskimo, for a warning had been received at Albany from Moose that influenza was again loose on the bay.

Placing the Cree waiting out on the ice, Garth sent him for the dog-team and leaving the efficient Etienne watching a kettle of canned soup and a coffee pot on an oil stove, returned to Captain Craig Galbraith, alias McDonald Hal!

Once after his return home he had heard from the man who had brought him unconscious through that hail of gas and lead and steel, and whom he had never seen since the day Galbraith left the same hospital to rejoin his command. In his letter from Halifax, Craig had refused an invitation to visit Montreal, pleading business, but, unknown to Garth, the giant at whom the women of France were wont to turn admiring eyes, had come home wearing the grin of a gargoyle. Then, like a rifle shot, struck home the realization that the man wanted in Halifax for killing his wife's lover was the man in the bunk. He pictured the agony of him, once called Handsome Galbraith, bringing that twisted grimace back to the wife he had loved—the blind rage, born of despair and shame, that heated his blood on finding her faithless as a woman, and as a hero's wife, for a broad chest of Craig Galbraith, famous in the Canadian corps for his trench raids, wore the bronze badge of the elect—the Victoria cross.

If he died, it did not matter; but if he lived? If he lived, he was a hunted man. Cameron would send a party to Seal Cove on hearing from Guthrie of his discovery. The ship and fur would be held for government action. In the meantime what of the man in delirium?

Etienne entered with soup, which Galbraith mechanically swallowed.

"Is the Cree back with the dogs, or did he leave us?"

"No, he come back. I tol heem I would follow heem an' cut hees throat if he run away," said Savanne dryly.

"Etienne, we can't stay here. We'll pick up this flu, or something worse. The ship is a morgue. And I won't leave the man who wouldn't leave me."

For a space Guthrie puffed furiously at his pipe. Suddenly he slumped his knee. "I've got it! Listen! His heart is strong, and the fever, as near as I can tell, is not as bad as it might be. It's fifty miles to Elkwan. With the Cree's dogs you can make it by daylight. Well wrapped up and bound, so he can't roll out or hurt himself, he'll make it. It isn't cold, and cold air is better than this stinking ship."

Etienne listened as if he thought Guthrie had suddenly gone mad. "But you're wery you go?" he broke in.

Guthrie smiled. "I'm going to take our dogs to Albany."

"To Albany?"

"Yes! It's my duty to report this to Cameron at once."

"De Cree can go. I'll pay him well."

"But," Etienne sensed that something lay behind it all, "we tak' dis man to Elkwan an' de police com—den w'at?" Etienne also had guessed.

"At Albany," smiled Guthrie. "I'll tell Cameron that you shot yourself accidentally—bad wound. And I am going to bring Miss Quarrier up the coast tomorrow, to nurse you. She knows all about wounds—and I think she'll come," added Guthrie quietly.

"By gar!" The half-breed stared at his chief in unqualified admiration. "It's his only chance for life. Here he would die. The place is infested with germs—ought to be burned. You understand? You start as soon as you can. I'm on my way now. I'll be in Elkwan tomorrow night—if she'll come with her medicine kit. And I think she will—for she's a soldier. God bless her!"

After forcing more soup down the throat of the sick man, he was given a stiff drink of whisky, bundled in furs, bound with strips of blanket, and with great difficulty carried to the sled. Fortunately for Guthrie's plan, the delirium had not taken a violent form, for the enormous strength of Galbraith would have baffled them.

With a grip of the hand Guthrie bade his staunch head man good-by, and whistling to Shot, started with his tired team for Albany. Already the day the dogs had done sixty miles and the forty miles before them over the rough sea-ice, even with the light sled, would, if pushed, bring them into Albany, five sore-footed, stiff-legged cripples. So it was not until the sky grayed with the dawn that Guthrie drove up to the tradehouse at Fort Albany, and feeding his tired team, put them in an empty shack where they might sleep through the morning, undisturbed by the hectoring of the post dogs.

Later, walking in on the Camerons at their breakfast, he told of the stalking of the schooner of the dead.

"Well, that's the wildest tale I have heard in forty years on this coast," ejaculated the factor, while his wife and children sat with averted faces. "Not a soul alive on the ship?"

"Not a soul alive," repeated Garth. "But probably the whisky they carried didn't help any. The schooner reeked with it. Poor devils, they must have stayed drunk to ease their misery."

"And the fur, two years' trade, did you see it?"

"No, but Etienne said there was a lot of it on board. Then, somehow, in the casing his rifle, he shot himself."

"Shot himself?"

"Yes, in the hip. That's why I'm here," Guthrie took the bit in his teeth as his gray eyes squarely met Cameron's. "I'm going to ask Miss Quarrier to come to Elkwan with her medicine kit. She knows wounds—I'm afraid of blood poisoning."

"But, whyever didn't you put him on the sled care of him better at Albany, and then—"

Guthrie shook his head. "He wouldn't come, Cameron. He thinks he's going to die, and wanted to be with his wife and children."

"Oh, but how can you ask that girl to go to Elkwan? She's needed here. Swan'll raise a row of a row—has already over your seeing her."

"Of course, we don't want anything to happen to Etienne," he temporized, "but why you didn't bring him here is beyond me."

"I've already told you why, Cameron. The gray eyes of the speaker were black, as a row of a row—has already over your seeing her."

Supreme as Tennis Queen

HELEN WILLS, twenty-one-year-old "poker-faced" girl of Berkeley, Calif., now holds sway as the unrivaled empress of the tennis courts, for Miss Suzanne Lenglen cannot challenge her position.

being outside the pale of amateur tennis. Miss Wills took a two-handed grasp on the scepter of power through victories over every prominent amateur of the United States, England, and continental Europe.

The last obstacle in the path of Miss Wills' ascent to the tennis has ever shown in the championship, letting loose with an attack of such withering pace and deadly accuracy as to make a mockery of Miss Nuthall's efforts to hold her off.

Who knows but that Helen's relentless onslaught against the English girl was inspired by visions of the foreign child star's decisive victory of a day or so before over Miss Wills' little friend, Helen Jacobs, also of California.

Friends and followers of the pretty daughter of a California physician say that Helen Wills, now that she has recovered from an operation for appendicitis and is not handicapped by a physical weakness, could take into camp Suzanne Lenglen, erstwhile queen of the courts.

But it is hardly likely the argument as to whether the United States or France has the best woman tennis player of the present day will be settled. Suzanne is a professional and Helen cannot meet her on the amateur tennis courts.—Grit.

Shift Play Finds True Supporter in Cavanaugh

MAJ. Frank Cavanaugh, noted Fordham coach, the only man who stood up boldly in defense of the shift play at the coaches' meeting in New York, is not especially well known to the new football fans, but the coaches know him and respect him as one of the greatest original thinkers in football, a man who ranks with Warner and Doble as the originator of new strategies. Many a coach has made a reputation by using the shift Cavanaugh has left behind him.

Cavanaugh's greatest fault has been a complete freedom from the sham that a football coach must assume to get on with our more reputable educational institutions. He makes his words and his professions square with his actions.

He insists that his job is to win football games and that he plays to win and this frankness has been used by his rivals to support a rumor that he goes to unfair extremes in actual practice, practiced by other great men of the gridiron who preach sportsmanship with no other purpose than to soften the opposition.

Cavanaugh has always taught his teams to fight and he has taught them how to fight effectively. He has made them black hard and tactically hard and run hard, but he has never gone an inch with his more sanctimonious colleagues in showing his men how to evade the spirit of the rules.

LINE CAPTAINS HAVE BIG EDGE

Predominate in Survey of 410 College Teams.

Not many years ago it was a common practice for football teams to select backfield men as captains. Recently, however, the custom has changed and the present football season finds that more line men have been favored with the captaincy than backs. A survey of 410 college eleven shows that 234 of the leaders are ends, tackles, guards or centers, while only 176 are quarterbacks, halfbacks or fullbacks.

The quarterback post, at one time the most popular position upon which to bestow the captaincy, has undergone a decided slump this season for only 57 quarters have been called upon to lead their teams into action. As a matter of fact quarterback is much less popular than two of the line berths, for the tackles have 66 captaincies to their credit and the guards are close behind with 64. Fullbacks have taken more of slide than the quarters, for only 30 of them have been chosen as leaders for the 1937 season.

The shoes of captains will be filled by more fullbacks than any other players, 83 of them being called upon to direct gridiron machines. The ends and centers are at the rear of the list, but, even so, plenty of direction will be given from those places, for 54 terminal men and 50 pivots will serve as captains.

Descendants of Old Incas Worry Bolivia

Washington.—The Indian revolt in Bolivia, South America, is being carried on by a people closely related to the ancient Incas of the Andean highlands, whose civilization, before the coming of the Spanish conquerors, was one of the most highly developed in the New World. A bulletin from the National Geographic society tells of these highlanders and their past glories.

"The Indians of Bolivia are Aymaras," says the bulletin, "while the direct descendants of the Incas, in Peru, are known as Quichuas. The the race from which the great Incan civilization sprang.

Have Little to Do With Whites. The Bolivian Aymaras and the Peruvian Quichuas are much alike in appearance and characteristics. Those of the highlands of both countries have developed huge chests in the rarefied air. Their active life of climbing has given them extra strong leg muscles. Both have dark reddish complexions, broad faces and black eyes. They are a sullen people, having little to do with the whites and apparently resenting their intrusion.

"More than 50 per cent of the inhabitants of Bolivia are full-blood Aymaras, while nearly 30 per cent are of mixed blood, the so-called Cholas. The Cholas and the whites live for the most part in La Paz, the capital of Bolivia, and the other sizeable towns. The village populations are almost wholly Indian, and large numbers of Indians also live on the agricultural estates and the grazing lands, working usually for white owners.

Wear Few Clothes.

"Although it is bitterly cold on the wind-swept, bleak upland plains of Bolivia, the natives wear little clothing, most of them going bare-legged. They seem intent, however, on keeping their heads warm, and beneath their hats men wear woolen skull caps. They live chiefly on frozen potatoes and dried goat meat.

"The great mass of the Indian population of Bolivia is illiterate. Many of the Indians cannot speak Spanish, and some who understand the language pretend ignorance to avoid contacts with the whites.

"Yet the ancestors of these people produced great cities which give evidence of a high degree of culture. One of the most remarkable of the Inca cities was Machu Picchu, a city of refuge where Inca civilization was kept alive during many centuries. The ruins of this city, hidden in almost inaccessible mountain fastnesses, were discovered by a National Geographic society expedition in 1912.

"The most famous pre-Incan ruins are those of Tiahuanaco, in Bolivia, not far from Lake Titicaca. These are believed to be the remains of buildings constructed by the ancestors of the Aymaras. The walls, still standing, are composed of huge stones set without mortar. The stones were dressed so well by their ancient makers that they are in perfect contact and have remained as placed hundreds of years ago."

old Incas, at the height of their power, conquered the Aymaras of their day, but the Aymaras land around Lake Titicaca was the holy land of the Incas, because they looked upon it as the origin of both their civilization and their blood. Because of this relationship the Aymaras received special privileges over the vasals of the Incas. The full-blooded Bolivian Indians of today therefore may be looked upon as representatives of

Linked Football With Crime in Old Days

London.—The official opening of the football season was held without fear of the law such as prevailed in years gone by.

In the year 1314, Edward II forbade the game and in 1389 Richard II passed a new act for its suppression, while Henry IV, Henry VIII and Elizabeth I all tried to stem its increasing popularity by increasing penalties.

These laws were frequently enforced against delinquents and it is recorded that at Dublin in 1570, one Denis Wogan was fined £10 and jailed for a week because he kicked off at a local football game.

Despite the laws, however, many games were played every year and an old record says that "thanks to the sturdy apprentices the streets of London were full of footballs."

READJUSTMENTS

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

WE ARE, as I have often remarked, the slaves of habit, good or bad. The older we are the more difficult it is to readjust ourselves to new conditions, to take on new friends, and to be happy in new surroundings. Winter or summer, at work or during vacation, I awake at about the same hour, and try as I will I cannot long be contented. I must be up and at something. It is a habit I learned, with difficulty I must admit, long ago on the farm, but, having learned it, I am a slave to it. I want the same things for breakfast. Wherever I am, I am a little uneasy unless I am in my own chair. I am contented only when I have my old friends about me. And yet I know full well that one should learn to be and to do otherwise, for sooner or later readjustments will have to be made.

Fighting Men to Be Well Equipped

Washington.—New weapons far superior to those used by the American army during the World war have been developed by the Ordnance branch of the War department. Predominant characteristics of the new weapons over the old are increased ranges, heavier projectiles and greater mobility.

While the United States has not progressed so far as European armies, especially England, in the mechanization of its fighting equipment, inquiry reveals unusually important advances in the development of new artillery weapons. Examination of the new weapons discloses that in case of another emergency, the American army will at least have weapons perfected which can be rushed into production with full confidence that they will function efficiently on the battle field.

Two outstanding examples in the artillery weapons are the 75-millimeter gun and the 75-millimeter pack howitzer. Other improved weapons include a new 155-millimeter or 6-inch field gun and the 75-millimeter pack split trail, an improved 87-millimeter infantry weapon, a new trench mortar, two new 3-inch anti-aircraft guns and a 14-inch howitzer.

Artillerymen are confident that the new 75-millimeter gun developed in this country since the war is destined to make the smaller caliber field gun a more efficient weapon. The American 75, while weighing slightly more than the famous French 75-millimeter field gun, used so widely during the war, has a much greater range and a wider field of fire. Where the old weapon had a maximum range of 9,200 yards, the new American rifle fires a 15-pound projectile a distance of 15,000. Its elevation, thanks to the use of a split trail, is 45 degrees, while the old weapon had an elevation of only 19 degrees.

The new American 75 will be horse-drawn and tests have shown it can be taken anywhere the old 75 could go. This gun has been adopted for army use. Companion pieces for this weapon are the new 75-millimeter pack howitzer and the much-admired re-

Credit Goes to Maxim for Idea in Aviation

Hiram S. Maxim is believed to be the first to prove that a body heavier than air could be lifted by its own motive power. His crude and complicated machine accomplished the feat in July, 1894. It was supplied with screw propellers weighing 135 pounds each and measuring 17 feet 10 inches over the tips of the blades. These were attached to a shaft that ran at an average speed of 375 revolutions a minute, operated by a pair of compound engines, supplied with steam from a combined multiball boiler, feed-water heater and gas-heating burner, weighing 1,000 pounds, providing a heating surface of about 500 feet. The entire machine, together with its full equipment of fuel, water and men, weighed less than 8,000 pounds. A writer in Cassier's Magazine, in 1905, observed:

"As a mechanical structure this machine is unquestionably a masterpiece of work and it has been appropriately described by an eminent engineer as 'not an invention, but a museum of inventions.'"—Kansas City Star.

Los Angeles, Calif.—"It was my good fortune to get one of Dr. Pierce's books several years ago and it has been a wonderful help to me while bringing up my family. The plain advice given is invaluable to mothers."

Iowa Woman Found Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Always Helpful

Vinton, Iowa.—"When I was seventeen years old I had to stay at home from school. I finally had to quit school, I was so weak. I suffered for about two years before I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, then I picked up one of your books and read it. I began taking the medicine. Now I am a housekeeper with six children, and I have taken it before each one was born. I cannot tell you all the good I have received from it. When I am not as well as can be I take it. I have been doing this for over thirteen years and it always helps me. I read all of your little books I can get and I tell everyone I know what the Vegetable Compound does for me."—Mrs. FRANK STANLEY, 510 7th Avenue, Vinton, Iowa.

MENLO PARK

First Rain of the Season
The gentle rain that has been falling since yesterday is refreshing and will start the grass when the landscape will take on an attractive color. The rain has not harmed the farmers. Grapes, tomatoes and fruit of all kind still on the trees will not suffer by the mist.

Campaign Discussed
There was a big gathering of the citizens of the town last Saturday evening at the headquarters of the committee on incorporation in the bank building to discuss the plan of campaign and to set forth the advantages to be derived from the incorporation of the Town of Menlo Park as a city of the sixth class. All present were in accord as the benefits to be derived from incorporation. Many speakers stressed the fact that the enforcement of the zoning laws would materially aid in bringing new settlers to town. Police regulations would also help in building up the community and encourage a fine class of residents to locate here. J. J. Harcom was the chairman of the meeting and in a lengthy and well-phased address set forth the objects of the gathering and the good results that would be gained by all by incorporation. He outlined a campaign for the election that would enlighten the citizenry on incorporation. He planned to divide the territory in districts to be in charge of a captain and lieutenant in bringing out a full vote on November 16. Ten of those present agreed to take up the work contemplated by the chairman. Others who spoke on the subject of incorporation were Dr. A. E. Blake, Miss Emma Nole, Frank Cain, E. E. Quayle, Mr. Ellis, M. M. Rankin, Mrs. Stribling.

The meeting was enthusiastic, demonstrating clearly the trend of opinion on the all-important subject of incorporation. The big meeting augurs well for success at the polls on November 16.

The time for filing nominations closed on Wednesday at noon. Those filed for town trustees were: A. E. Blake, F. H. Cain, J. C. Brown, W. E. Dale, E. J. McLaughlin, J. J. Harcom, M. Gardner, J. C. Ellis, W. T. Roper and G. A. Montell. For treasurer, J. W. Ryan; clerk, Fannie I. Kurlis and M. M. Rankin.

A meeting of the citizens of Menlo Park will be held at the headquarters every Saturday evening from now until the date of election and everyone is invited to attend to listen to the arguments in favor of incorporation.

William Middleton is reported quite low at the Community hospital at Berkeley. He was removed there several weeks ago suffering from the flu.

Large Sales Reported
Large sales of lots are reported in Felton Gables. Over half the tract has been sold to San Francisco residents who are to erect handsome homes there next spring. It is one of the most attractive subdivisions on the peninsula.

Dumbarton Bridge Doing Good
The Dumbarton bridge is doing a brisk business. Owing to the football season thousands pass over the span on Saturdays from the east bay section to the Stanford stadium, where big games are played every Saturday.

Need of Traffic Officer
Menlo Park is sadly in need of a traffic officer to regulate travel on the state highway. Pedestrians are compelled to stand on the sidewalk for several minutes at almost any time of the day or night to wait for an opening to cross the street, so congested is the travel on the thoroughfare. Then, too, motorists fairly fly through town caring little about the lives of others. Some day there will be a tragedy, then it will be too late to get an officer. Some means should be provided to secure such an officer to protect the lives of the people.

Reports Demand for Property
W. E. Monroe, the real estate broker, reports a lively demand for Menlo Park property. He has consummated several sales this week. The demand for realty in this section is growing daily.

Cleland of North Palo Alto. She and her husband were schoolmates at the Sequoia Union High School. Mr. Spiegle is now stationed at San Pedro on the U. S. S. West Virginia. The Clelands are well known in Menlo Park.

Return from Tour
Mr. and Mrs. George Angus returned by way of the Panama Canal last Monday from an extended visit to the east. They saw all the sights located beyond the Rockies and enjoyed the beauties of New York and Niagara Falls.

To Leave for Washington
Senator S. M. Shortridge will leave shortly for Washington to be on hand early when Congress convenes in December. Shortridge has important committee work to transact and he wants to complete it before the law-making body meets. He is chairman of some very important committees that have much business to transact. The senator is a hard worker who exacts diligence and attention from the other members. From the east comes the report that the senator is one of the leading contenders for the vice-presidency next year. He is one of the most popular members of the upper house at Washington.

A Visitor from Seattle
Major John E. Carroll, member of the city council of Seattle and president of that body, with his wife and daughter spent the week end at Menlo Park with Judge and Mrs. C. A. Shurtleff. The Major visited and was interested in the Dumbarton bridge as well as other matters pertaining to city governments which he has observed in this part of California.

Wednesday and Thursday, "Rex," the wild horse in "No Man's Law," and the "Juvenation of Aunt Mary."

PRINCE WILLIAM OF SWEDEN IS GIVEN NASH AMBASSADOR BY SCANDINAVIAN WORKMEN

When Prince William of Sweden visited Kenosha, Wis. last week on his tour of the country, His Royal Highness was presented with a Nash Ambassador by Scandinavian employees of The Nash Motors Company. The gift, a complete surprise to the Prince, apparently touched him deeply.

"I why, really, I don't know what to say," said Prince William when he had been informed that the new car which silently glided up in front of him was to be his. The formal presentation was made by W. H. Alford, vice president of The Nash Motors Company in behalf of the Scandinavian employees, and the royal guest, recovering his composure, addressed the men who had played an important role in the building of the car had participated in the presentation.

"Nothing that I can remember has ever touched me more deeply than the gift of this fine automobile from you Americans of the Scandinavian race," he said. "It is not often that a man receives so fine a present as a splendid automobile and every time I step on 'he gas,' as you express it over here, I will recall the happy occasion. I cannot help but feel proud of the Scandinavians in America; everywhere I go on my tour of this country I find they have given a good account of themselves and that in America as at home they are splendid citizens."

An engrossment, accompanying the gift and presented to the Prince by Alford read as follows: "On the occasion of his visit to the factory of The Nash Motors Company of Kenosha, Wisconsin, U. S. A., on October 13, 1937, the Scandinavian employees of the company beg His Royal Highness, Prince William of Sweden, their distinguished and honored guest, to accept as a token of their esteem and affection, a Nash Ambassador Six motor car, the product of a factory employing more workmen of Scandinavian birth or extraction in proportion to its total force than any other automobile factory in the United States of America."

On the evening of the presentation, Prince William lectured in Kenosha and later he was the guest of Scandinavian societies at a late supper. Before leaving Kenosha, Prince William presented Alford, who as president of the Kenosha City Council had introduced him at the various held throughout the tour, a photograph bearing the inscription: "In remembrance of a delightful day and a real homecoming, October 14, 1937, with kindest regards to the proud and happy Nash Ambassador owner, Prince William of Sweden."
